Florida lawmaker seeks new PWC operator age limit

A bill that would raise the age to legally operate a personal watercraft in Florida from 14 to 16 was filed by state Sen. Jeremy Ring.

The bill also would end the practice of allowing children to steer a boat with the proper supervision of an adult with boater education.

The fine for allowing an underage operator would remain the same, a $50 civil penalty, according to the News Service of Florida.

The bill comes a few months after two 14-year-old boys vanished at sea after leaving Jupiter Inlet in a 19-foot SeaCraft. ❖
