Proposal to close New River bridge for 12 days draws boater concerns

Susannah Bryan – Contact Reporter – Sun Sentinel

A drawbridge in the heart of downtown Fort Lauderdale may be closed to marine traffic for 12 days in February, sparking an outcry from shipyard owners who say it will crush business right in the midst of the winter yachting season.

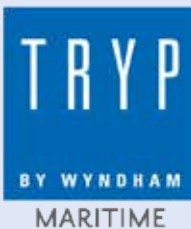

The bridge closure, which must get approval from the U.S. Coast Guard, could become one giant headache for the region's boating industry, some businesses say. One boatyard owner says yachts won't be able to get to him during one of the busiest times of year, potentially costing him as much as $600,000 in business.

"Everybody stands to lose a lot of money," said Jim Steel, owner of Steel Towing. "I'd love to see them switch the times [to after season]."

The Florida East Coast Railway bridge, which sits just west of the Andrews Avenue bridge, is normally kept open to allow boats to pass, closing only a dozen times a day to make way for freight trains coming through town. ❖

COMING 2017

If you have been following the progress of the construction of the TRYP Maritime Hotel by Wyndham, you have noted that it is moving towards completion! In the past month, windows have been installed, balcony railings have been placed and painting is underway. We will keep you advised of the plans for the opening in the Spring of 2017. # A WORD FROM THE DOCKMASTER

THappy New Year! As you are aware, access to the marina through our gate system has changed. There are no longer codes that, when entered on the key pad, will open the gate. Too many unauthorized persons had the codes and were using them to enter the marina property. It is in ALL of best interest that we keep the facility secure. Thus, we made the change to gate cards.

I know it has been a frustrating process for some of you and I sincerely appreciate your cooperation. Please see me or stop by the Dockmaster's Office if you have any questions about use of your gate card or other ways to access the property. You can also ALWAYS call Security from either key pad, if you need assistance. That number is #0912.

Remember that ANY and EVERY vendor must sign in at the Dockmaster's Office prior to entering the marina. There are no exceptions to this rule. Both our Security Staff and I will be monitoring the marina property and if a vendor HAS NOT signed in at the Dockmaster's Office, the vendor will be asked to leave the marina and will not be allowed to return for the day. Please assist us in enforcing our policies. - John
