Sea Tow Foundation teams with ACR on beacon rental program

For boaters who are heading offshore, or planning an extended trip or other boating adventure, being able to rent an EPIRB or PLB is a great way for them to have peace of mind that should the unexpected happen, emergency responders will be alerted and provided with the location of the boater, greatly reducing the time until help arrives.”

Boaters will have access to rent either a PLB or an EPIRB through boatingsafety.com for $45 to $65 a week. An EPIRB is registered to a vessel, designed to be mounted on a boat, and will emit a distress signal for an extended period of time. A PLB is smaller in size and intended to be worn by the boater.

The foundation will rent the beacons to boaters through www.boatingsafety.com/epirb. All proceeds earned from the beacon rentals will be reinvested in the foundation’s other lifesaving programs, such as its designated skipper campaign and life jacket loaner program, and later further invested in extending the emergency beacon rental program. ❖

Cuban-Americans allowed to visit Cuba by recreational boat

Commodore José M. Diaz Eschrich

of the Hemingway International Yacht Club in Cuba (which is shown here) says authorities reversed a previous decision and will allow Cuban-Americans who were born in Cuba to come to the country on recreational boats. A Cuban policy change could affect hundreds of thousands of Floridians.

The revision would present the U.S. marine industry with new opportunities while challenging individual American boaters who are now allowed to visit Cuba.

Eschrich told Peter Swanson, a longtime contributor to Soundings and the event content manager for the Active Interest Media Marine Group, that Cuban authorities have decided to reverse their previous policy and allow Cuban-Americans who were born in Cuba to visit by recreational vessel.

There are 1.25 million Cuban Americans living in Florida, just a hundred miles from the Cuban coast, and more than half of them were born in Cuba. The move follows a decision earlier this year in which the Cuban government backed off on a ban on Cuban-American arrivals by cruise ship. ❖

Stop by the Dockmaster’s Office and take a look at our new Marina Bay t-shirts and hats. We have all sizes in several colors to choose from!

Congratulations to one of the vessels in our marina making the cover of this month’s Southern Living! Can you find her on the docks?

A WORD FROM THE DOCKMASTER

So, last month we had a little taste of preparation for a hurricane! Luckily, Investment 99 has not yet formed into a named storm and we only received some rain. It is important that each of you secures your vessel in the event of a storm. Please monitor the progression of any storm and govern yourself accordingly. Specifically, this means removing awnings, exterior canvas and cushions, and anything that could act as a projectile from your decks. If your lines are old, then replace or double them up. If you are not in the area, you MUST have a designated representative to handle these matters. Hurricane season is no joke and we all need to treat it with respect! - John
